The ones I was looking at were quick animations like what you see with an animated GIF, or at least this was my one-time experience with these types of files.. Try the browser, however I dont believe this format is very useful Perhaps just my humble opinion there, but thats all I have about the topic.. Please suggest me a good app for same with option for seeking the video play too.. I have viewed some small ones in a browser, however that was also a case where it a joke forwarded to me, I viewed it and had the appropriate amusement, and then moved on and never worried again about that format.

All other Adobe support, like the browser flash plug-in and Adobe Integrated Runtime, are no longer available for Linux.. I think the only issue might be if the browser has a shock wave add-on, or allows this capability.. They hope these examples will help you to get a better understanding of the Linux system and that you feel encouraged to try out things on your own.. I think what happened also was that once I had used my browser for it, the system assumed this was my default choice and used Firefox to open them thereafter..
